

THE ART + SCIENCE OF VALUE INVESTING

traditional value investing unique approach

Experience

Ceredex Value Advisors LLC and its predecessors have managed money for institutions, endowments, foundations, and high-net-worth investors since 1995.¹ Ceredex manages approximately $10.1 billion in assets² and is a wholly owned affiliate of Virtus Investment Partners.

Continuity

Our core investment team has been managing value equity portfolios together for over 20 years, offering a degree of continuity uncommon in the investment industry.

Traditional Value Investing

Portfolio managers and analysts collaborate to execute on bottom-up, company-by-company research, studying the distinct nuances of each investment candidate. Our boutique size and horizontal structure provide each portfolio manager with the flexibility and autonomy needed to apply well-informed judgments to time-sensitive decisions.

¹ Ceredex was created March 31, 2008, when all of the investment decision-makers associated with the value equity investment strategies of Virtus Fund Advisers, LLC f/k/a RidgeWorth Capital Management LLC became employees of Ceredex.

finding value

Blending art and science, we seek to capitalize on our distinct perspective gleaned from decades of studying companies.

Evaluate Companies of all Types and Sizes

There are many companies that are strong, with significant long-term potential for capital appreciation—yet, for various reasons, their stocks may fall out of favor with investors. Our research strives to identify those companies across all market capitalizations, sectors, and industries.

The Science

Our methodology screens for dividend policies, historic trading levels, and a wide array of financial measures, taking advantage of the science of investing.

The Art

Finessing those findings is the art. Interpreting the nuances in the data and making informed decisions relies on the distinctive experience, talent, and knowledge of our investment professionals. We believe successful investing requires instinct and boldness—qualities that fundamental research alone cannot reveal.

Our team prides itself on its thorough review of market demands for each company's products or services, as well as extensive research into financial conditions and management talent.

We look to capture compelling opportunities in undervalued securities to help investors achieve their long-term goals.

a straightforward approach to a complex problem

Purchase Criteria

In our search for value, we consistently ask three critical questions:

- 1 Does the company pay a dividend?
- 2 Is the valuation attractive?
- 3 Are the fundamentals improving?

Dividend Policy

Signals management confidence and discipline

Attractive Valuation

Identifies low-expectation stocks

Improving Fundamentals

Reveals indicators for potential appreciation

Sell Discipline

Equally important is our decision process about exiting a position. A change in any of our criteria, whether a revision to dividend policy, meeting our valuation target, or deteriorating fundamentals, may send a signal, causing us to remove a security from our portfolios.

We believe that undervalued, dividend-paying stocks with improving fundamentals have the potential to produce positive investment results.

Understanding Dividends

Our dividend requirement immediately disqualifies thousands of stocks, allowing us to concentrate solely on those we believe are the best candidates for our portfolios.

- Future earnings potential. Dividends reflect management's confidence in its ability to generate profits.
- Corporate discipline. To pay dividends on a periodic basis, a company must impose a high degree of control over its business operations to meet future earnings targets and keep its objectives, product plans, and expenses in good order.
- Transparency. Paying a dividend also validates the transparency of a company's accounting process and increases the credibility of its earnings reports. Dividends have other virtues, too—not only can they contribute to an investment's total return, but the inclusion of dividend-paying equities in a portfolio may also lower overall share price volatility.

Assessing Valuation

Our disciplined valuation approach identifies companies trading at the lower end of their historical valuation range, with the potential for improving fundamentals that may reignite investor interest and transform a value stock into an opportunity.

- Absolute and relative value. We analyze a firm's discount valuation on both an absolute and relative basis, comparing a company to its peers, industry, market, and historical trading levels.
- Specific metrics. While other managers may apply "one-size-fits-all" valuation constraints across their entire portfolio, our methodology targets specific financial metrics that we believe provide the best measure of value based on the security's industry or sector.

Identifying Potential

We are constantly looking for signs that a company's fundamentals have the potential to improve.

- Bottom-up analysis. We study each company, creating a mosaic of information from its balance sheet, income statement, cash flow statement, and management.
- Expectations. We monitor the market and the company to reveal possible catalysts for fundamental change—such as a positive initiative like a change in management, business restructuring, or product innovation—that have the potential to repair a stock's valuation disparity.
